
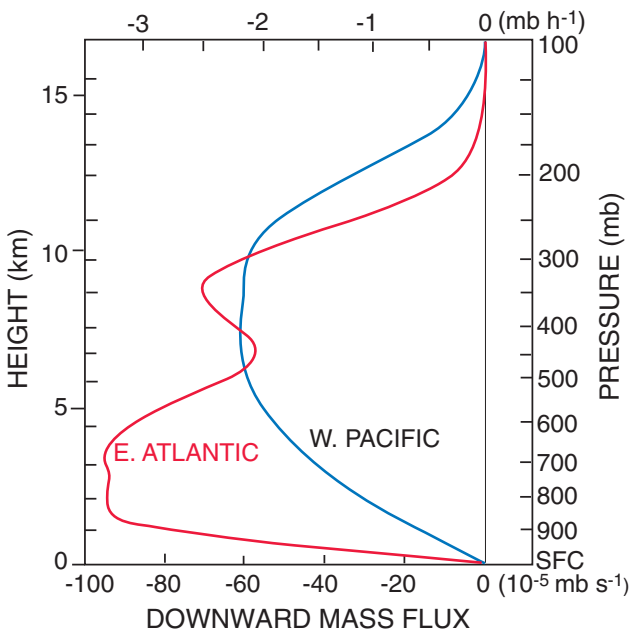

Figure 25. Contrasting vertical mass flux profiles in disturbed regions of the ITCZ in the eastern Atlantic and the "warm core" region of the western Pacific. In the ITCZ the low-level convergence (indicated by the large negative vertical derivative) is concentrated within the lowest 1.5 km, whereas in the western Pacific it is much weaker and extends all the way up to 5 km.